We're a cross-sector collaborative that supports work to address many different domains of health to improve overall health and wellness in Oxford County. We work with partners across the county to address Adverse Childhood Experiences as a health factor, and have been involved with community education efforts, largely by hosting showings of the Paper Tigers and Resilience films. We've worked to help support schools in becoming trauma-informed by making trainings available to school staff. The Collaborative is an active partner in the Oxford County Resilience Project (OCRP), another multi-sector networked effort to engage and empower youth, We're working with the OCRP on many activities, including assembling a toolkit of resources that will be freely available to schools to support building awareness and understanding of ACEs and building resilience.

Healthy Oxford Hills is a Healthy Maine Partnership serving southern Oxford County. We are the administrative home of the Oxford County Wellness Collaborative, which has actively promoted ACEs education by sponsoring showings and discussions of "Paper Tigers" across the county, as well as hosting Sue Mackey Andrews coming and speaking to groups about ACEs and resilience. We are concerned with the health and well-being of residents of all ages.

Our agency is a local non profit community action agency that is committed to building thriving individuals, families and communities. As a part of this commitment we participate in many cross-sector collaboratives including the Oxford County Wellness Collaborative. Our work in this county-wide collaborative has a strong focus on creating a community where adverse treatment of others is reduced, if not eliminated, and resilience is increased. It is achieved through professional, community and individual education.
