We are a collaborative of over 45 local, state and tribal partners working to increase health, hope and well-being for vulnerable community members in Washington County. The CCC is committed to removing barriers and creating opportunities that are responsive, strengths based, and culturally competent, and that are informed by the impacts of poverty, trauma and substance abuse. In addition to expanding the continuum of services and supports for vulnerable community members, the CCC offers trainings and technical assistance in response to the needs of its partners as well as organizations and communities statewide.
